PAKISTAN: An Introduction to Dispute Resolution: General Commercial

Contributed by FGE Ebrahim Hosain

As per The World Bank's Doing Business Report (2020) (the "2020 DB Report"), which assesses countries' ease of doing business on the basis of certain quantitative indicators, Pakistan ranks 108th out of 190 economies. This is a significant improvement over last year's ranking, yet it must be acknowledged that Pakistan's legal system continues to struggle to keep pace with its economic ambitions.

In October last year, the Federal Law Minister told the press that his ministry had proposed cutting the duration of civil litigation by amending the existing law in such a way that the final decision in a civil suit may be passed and implemented in less than five years. However, as per the 2020 DB Report, Pakistan ranks 156th out of 190 on the enforcement of contracts indicator and it takes approximately 1,071 days to enforce a contract in Pakistan.

Although overcrowded dockets, legal costs and delays are problems lamented almost all over the world, Pakistan is making steady efforts to restore people's confidence in the judicial system by improving procedural delays, as well as by encouraging modes of dispute resolution as alternatives to litigation as an actionable recourse for redress of grievance.

The establishment of commercial courts through the Punjab Commercial Courts Ordinance 2021 for expeditious disposal of claims arising from commercial transactions, the operation of electronic courts at the Islamabad High Court and the implementation of an e-hearing system at the Supreme Court of Pakistan are encouraging signs for foreign investors.

Also noteworthy are the various investor-friendly reforms by Pakistan's regulatory authorities such as (i) online company incorporation procedures, (ii) service delivery time-frames for obtaining electricity for businesses, (iii) efficient and transparent property registration processes, (iv) online payment modules for value-added tax and corporate income tax, and (v) the Web-Based One Customs (WEOC) electronic system to simplify cross-border trade etc.

Businesses have also realised the benefits of opting out of the traditional legal dispute resolution mechanism of approaching domestic courts and instead agreeing on arbitration as the preferred means. However, the most immediate test of an arbitration clause comes when one party seeks to avoid arbitration by initiating legal proceedings in courts. Although the legislature has lagged behind, the superior courts in Pakistan have strived hard to honour arbitration clauses, especially foreign arbitration clauses. The Supreme Court has repeatedly held that "unless there are compelling reasons, an arbitration clause should be honoured."

Such a progressive attitude by the superior courts ought to be reassuring for foreign investors, especially since the New York Convention 1958 has been implemented by way of local legislation and given permanent life as an act of Parliament. This definitive legal architecture for enforcement of foreign awards in Pakistan may have come late to Pakistan, but we can benefit from the global experience in dealing with this celebrated arbitration law.

Alternatively, parties can also opt for mediation as a more conciliatory and less adversarial mode of dispute resolution. Recent amendments to the Civil Procedure Code give discretion to the courts to refer matters to mediation, should they deem fit, at any stage of the proceedings and, in the event of a settlement, pronounce judgment in terms of the mediated settlement agreement. Such measures will not only reduce the time but also the cost of dispute resolution between parties, thereby promoting a healthy culture of cooperation and conciliation.
